

All of the following evidences can be pinpointed to a specific source, except

- Fingerprints
- DNA
- Bullet markings
- Petroleum fuel

A buccal swab refers to one of the following:

- Swab obtained from the inside of a cheek for DNA analysis
- A venous blood sample kept in a special bucket
- A sweat swab taken from a chest of a drug abuser
- Sample in an air tight container for arson investigation

Maintaining a chain of custody is essential to preserve forensic evidences. One of the followings tracking the record of a sample is true:

- During transportation to the laboratory
- From sampling to reporting
- During laboratory analysis
- During sampling